I often ask myself what skills are necessary to be a good writer. <sup>0</sup> Do you have to (you) have a degree in literature or do a creative writing course? Is it absolutely necessary? Of course, everybody <sup>5</sup> _____ write stories or poems in their free time but it's probably best to accept the fact that for many of us it <sup>6</sup> _____ be a profession earning fame and fortune. The good news though is that you <sup>7</sup> _____ sell books and have a large readership to enjoy writing.

MY FORUM

kikno writes:

11.05.2008 11:35

My last job interview was very stressful. The interviewer first asked me if I had ever worked before. Then she was interested in why I had left my previous job and how I had heard about that vacancy. She also wanted to know how I saw myself in 10 years' time. I don't quite understand why she asked if I was married. The next question, though, was the toughest – she wanted to know how much I expected to earn. I think she liked my answers because finally she wanted to know when I would be available to start working.
